

HOW TO FILE A COMPLAINT

If you believe that you have been discriminated against by your employer because you are a victim of domestic violence, you can file a complaint with the New York State Division of Human Rights.

The New York State Human Rights Law covers employers with four or more employees. A complaint must be filed with the Division within one year of the alleged discriminatory act. Domestic violence victims are protected with regard to employment actions taken on or after July 7, 2009.

To file a complaint:

- Visit the Division's website, at WWW.DHR.NY.GOV, and download a complaint form. Completed complaints must be signed before a notary public, and returned to the Division (by mail or in person).
- Stop by a Division office in person.
- Contact one of the Division's offices, by telephone or by mail, to obtain a complaint form and/or other assistance in filing a complaint.

SOME EXAMPLES:

You obtain an order of protection because you are a victim of domestic violence. You provide the order to your employer, and explain that you are afraid the perpetrator may try to harass you at the workplace. Can your employment be terminated?

You may not be terminated because your employer learns that you are a domestic violence victim. This includes having an order of protection, or the perpetrator coming to the workplace. If the perpetrator violates the order of protection, or becomes abusive at the workplace, the police should be called as with any other person who engages in misconduct in the workplace.

You request time off to go to court, to move, or to seek assistance because of domestic violence. Your employer typically allows employees to take time off for personal needs and family emergencies. When your employer learns that you need the time off because of domestic violence, the time off is denied. Do you have any remedies?

It is unlawful to treat an employee differently with regard to any term, condition or privilege of employment because the employee is a victim of domestic violence.

You need time off to receive medical or mental health services as a result of the domestic violence. What are your rights?

Your need for time off for medical or mental health services is covered by the disability and reasonable accommodation provisions of the Human Rights Law. Unless it causes an undue hardship to the employer, you must be granted reasonable time off, and you may not be terminated. Your employer may request a note from the service provider, as long as the employer requires ALL employees to provide a note in circumstances that are similar

THE EMPLOYMENT RIGHTS OF DOMESTIC VIOLENCE VICTIMS

The New York State Human Rights Law was amended, effective July 7, 2009, to provide protection from employment discrimination for victims of domestic violence.

The Human Rights Law defines a domestic violence victim as an individual who is a victim of an act which would constitute a family offense under N.Y. Family Court Act § 812.

It is unlawful to discriminate against a domestic violence victim in hiring for a job, job advancement, requests for use of leave time, or other terms, conditions or privileges of employment.

It is also unlawful for an employer to take an action in retaliation for filing a complaint of discrimination.

PUBLIC POLICY

These employment rights further the public policy of New York State by protecting victims of domestic violence from discrimination in employment so they may have the ability to deal with the unique circumstances of their lives and achieve financial independence from their abuser.

OTHER PROTECTIONS FOR VICTIMS

Time off for medical care. Domestic violence victims who need time off from work for medical or mental health care are protected by the disability and reasonable accommodation provisions of the Human Rights Law. These rights can be enforced by the Division. Victims may also have rights under the federal Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA) and other disability laws; these laws are not enforced by the Division.

Other time off. It is illegal for an employer to take any adverse action against an employee who is a victim of a crime for taking time off to appear in court as a witness, to consult with a district attorney, or to obtain an order of protection, pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 215.14. This specific right is not enforced by the Division. However, it would be discriminatory under the Human Rights Law to treat a victim of domestic violence any differently than employees who need time off for other reasons.

Unemployment insurance. If you need to leave a job because of domestic violence you are not necessarily barred from receiving unemployment insurance benefits. Pursuant to N.Y. Labor Law § 593, circumstances related to domestic violence may be “good cause” for voluntarily quitting a job. Also, job performance problems related to domestic violence (such as absenteeism or tardiness) will not necessarily bar benefits.
